From the Galaxy.

My Field.

BY MARY ELLEN ATKINSON. The night had come; the moonlight whitely lay Athwart the field where I had sowed all day Seed I should ne'er behold Waying its harvest gold.

Naught even showed that seed was hidden there; In pallid light lay furrows long and bare; No blade, no leaf was seen Signing its promise green.

And on the shore the little shallop lay Which in the morn must bear me far away Where I might never know Whether the seed did grow.

And if I wept, 'twas none but God could see How much the hope of harvest was to me. He sent His angel down My trembling trust to crown.

His gentle angel led me by the hand Until we stood upon the bare, sown land, And then he turned and smiled, With eyes screne and mild. "Behold," he said, "to still thy human fear, In one short hour will God unfold the year." And as he spoke the word The barren closls were stirred,

And tiny blades crept out into the light, And grew, and grew, before my wondering sight, And then the ears were seen, Long-bearded, full, and green.

And while I watched the waving grain, behold The heads bent down with weight of ripened gold; The Angel said, "The Lord Shall give thee this reward. "Fear not to get thee hence across the sea, In harvest-time I'll bind thy sheaves for thee. Thy field may ripen late; Fear not, but trust and wait."

A little cloud sailed by and hid the moon; My angel comforter was gone too soon.

A tremor blurred the air:
Again my field lay bare,

Except that near me, close bestdo no that Rich harvest yet should be.

And in my bosom, cherished, loved, behold These precions ears of sacred harvest gold. Such fruit my field shall bear— I leave it in God's care.

THE HAUNTED HOUSE. BY REV. I. F. HOLTON.

A STORY OF LIFE IN LUDLOW. On the wide sandy plain which stretches its weary monotony between the crowded manufacturing villiages of Chicopee river and the quiet villages of Granby and South Hadley, stands a lonely house ten rods from the lonely road. It is of two stories and an L, though the single room in this last is the only room that is inhabitable.-The two story part, now a ruin, has never been more than a mere shell.—A quarter of a century ago, Shubael Jones put it up, planted a little orchard around it, and brought to it a black-eyed, high-tempered wife. But he was at that time Day Express Train leaves Concord at *9.35 a.

But she soon bought a little furniture of a family that was moving away and reestablished herself in the gloomy old wreck.

It was now late in the fall when the widow Jones first noticed that the grass was disappearing from the road side by the bars opposite her door. It soon grew obviously worse; and, though a bald spot on a man's head is no great wonder, this bare spot, with no hoofmarks on it, baffled all her ingenuity. The fence, too, seemed worn, as if by loungers leaning upon it. What could
